Buenos Aires – Argentina and Colombia agreed to deposit bet365 end a diplomatic dispute that intensified over the visceral attack by Argentine President Javier Milei against his colleague on the left in Colombia, leading the nation to the expulsion of diplomats from Argentina.

In a joint communication on Sunday, the ministries of Foreign Relations of the two Latin American countries said they "took concrete measures to overcome any differences and strengthen this relationship".

Colombia said that its ambassador summoned from Buenos Aires would return there, and the Argentine government informed the minister of Foreign Relations of Argentina to visit Bogotá. Colombia also distanced itself from the issue, threatening to expel Argentine diplomats by approving a new embassy named after the Republic of Central Africa (Argentina).

The tensions between Milei of Argentina and the Colombian President Gustavo Petro have repeatedly entered deposit bet365 bitter fights since Milei, an economist on the right, impetuous and ex-personality on TV, broke on the world stage last year. Tense exchanges include the nickname "communist assassin" for the same "Petro", describing socialists as a form of 'human excrement'. This time, the war of words between populist presidents began with Milei calling Petro a "terrorist assassin" deposit bet365 an interview last week. A reference to Petrobras while a member of the guerrilla left and that accused Milei on social media for diplomatically isolating Argentina to increase deposit bet365 tax for the poor of his libertarian policies; self-described anarcho-capitalist - promised to cut government spending, eliminating ministries and expensive programs as a way to curb triple inflation.

Nevertheless, both leaders came to power with promises of radical change
